Soviets Cross Miuss And Continue Drive Toward Town Of Mariupol

LONDON, Dec. 6 — German forces unleashed terrific new attacks today on the Moscow Front at a point only 40 miles west of the Russian capital, according to British military authorities.

The Nazis were centering their main effort to break through on a sector between the village of Dmitrov and the road leading from Moscow to Leningrad in the north.

Accounts reaching London said the Germans had built up a terrific concentration of fire power.

KUIBYSHEV, Dec. 6 — The Communist newspaper Pravda reported today that a Soviet offensive is developing on the Klin sector, northwest of Moscow.

The paper said the Germans have concentrated another tank division, a mechanized division and two infantry divisions on the Moscow Front.

South of the capital, Pravda admitted, the Germans have reached the Tula-Moscow railroad and captured a number of villages.

The paper said German counterattacks in the Mozhaisk sector west of Moscow were repulsed and that an enemy infantry battalion was annihilated at the village of "M."

It added that Soviet cavalry were continuing to advance at Stalingrad, south of Moscow, and that German forces there were retreating southward.

BERLIN, Dec. 6 — The German high command today announced that a Russian attempt to pierce the "iron ring" around besieged Leningrad had been repulsed with heavy losses.

The communique added that German forces had occupied Oumussar Island in the Gulf of Finland and that Nazi bombers had raided the Russian airplane factory at Rybinsk last night.

LONDON, Dec. 6 — London afternoon papers reported under banner headlines today that Russian forces on the Southern Front crossed the Miuss river 10 miles west of Taganrog and resumed their pursuit of the German armies retreating toward Mariupol.

As Far Eastern Crisis Grows, United States, Canada Open Link to Alaska

Royal Canadian Air Force pilots at Camp Borden, Ont.

By Horace D. Crawford
OTTAWA, Dec. 6 — Before snow flew in the Rockies, construction was nearly complete on seven modern, fully-equipped air fields between Edmonton, Alberta, and Whitehorse, in the Yukon, providing a direct route over which the United States can rush defense forces on short notice to strategic Alaska.

This information was given me by high dominion officials who explained this route was built on recommendations of the United States-Canadian permanent joint board of defense. While the proposed Alaska highway remains in the realm of controversial discussion as a military road, this vitally important air route is now in operation.

By coincidence, this air arm was built across western Canada during the summer that marked the 200th anniversary of the discovery of Alaska by the Danish navigator, Vitus Bering, then sailing for Russia.

Pretty Stenographer, 30, To Face Death Charges

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 6 — Blonde Helen O'Keefe, pretty, 30-year-old stenographer, today was ordered held without bond for the torch murder last November 12 of 65-year-old J. C. Franklin, investment broker whom she served as secretary for 11 years.

Miss O'Keefe has been free on $7,100 bonds, but District Attorney Dan Jackson declared today he would not again agree to her release on any bond. Judge Langston King issued an order canceling her bond.

The Harris County grand jury yesterday returned an indictment charging the modishly-dressed stenographer with "murder with malice aforethought." Attorney Jackson did not indicate whether it was this, or some new turn in the evidence, that led him to tighten restrictions against her.

The developing evidence surrounding the case, including a purported confession by Miss O'Keefe, has previously indicated that the aging Franklin was murdered because of a large sum of money, approximately $60,000, which would come to his company in the event of his accidental death.

Stenographer Stockholder
Miss O'Keefe, according to the evidence, was a heavy stockholder in Franklin's investment firm, and thus was in a position to benefit from the $60,000 insurance money even though it was paid to the company.

The blonde stenographer, however, has indicated she will fight every inch of the way in the legal battle during which prosecutors will attempt to obtain her conviction.

She has repudiated the purported confession, which officials said she made verbally, and has issued a written statement in which she denied that she committed the murder or had any implication in it.

She also denied that she would benefit to any considerable degree from her employer's insurance. Although she was a stockholder in the company, which she served as secretary-treasurer, she stated that her holdings were not main theaters of war with Nazi Germany.

Alaska, therefore, has attained an unprecedented strategic importance, increased still further by Japan's menacing movements in the Pacific.

Construction of these air fields marks another step in Canadian-United States co-operation in the defense of North America. Theirs is the story of modern man's conquest of the wilderness. It began last Jan. 27. Airplanes flew over the Northwestern Canadian wilderness with a strange cargo: a sawmill and a planing mill.

Dog teams hauled through winter's driving snows blazing trails. A sternwheel steamer, two specially-built tunnel-bottomed boats and several barges were constructed.

Watson Lake air field presented a problem, but the airport engineers solved it. They freighted 800 tons of materials up the Stikine river to Telegraph creek, and for 72 miles farther it was hauled by trucks over a tote road to Dease lake. Boats and barges carried another 800 tons of material 193 miles down the Dease and Liard rivers, where it was hauled 25 miles over a road that had to be chopped through a wilderness.

Nature Poses Problems
Another 800 tons of building material had to be moved to Fort Nelson from Fort St. John before April, because spring thaws then made the use of tractors and sleds impossible. Those boats, on the other hand, could not be used on the rivers and lake until May 15 when spring thaws had cleared them of ice.

Billion Asiatics May Turn On Uncle Sam If He 'Fishes In Troubled Waters'

TOKYO, Dec. 6 — The Japanese newspaper Kokumin warned the United States today that one billion Asiatics may turn on America if it attempts to "fish in the troubled waters" of the Far East.

The new press attack on the United States revived tension which previously had relaxed as a result of latest developments in Washington.

Meanwhile, Japan speeded preparations to bring her nationals home from Hong Kong, Malaya, British Borneo, Singapore and Mexico.

Kokumin published an eight-column article reviewing conditions in Asiatic countries and stating:

"Should the United States pursue its aggressive policy toward East Asia by attempting to fish in troubled waters without paying attention to anti-American and anti-British sentiment in the surging subject nations of southeastern and southwestern Asia, as well as the growing demand for racial self-determination, it must be reminded that 1,000,000,000 people of Asia would turn on the United States as irreconcilable foes."

Attitude Awaited
Meanwhile, Japanese officials awaited an "official" indication of the United States' attitude toward Japan's reply to President Roosevelt's request for an explanation of Japanese troop concentrations in French Indo-China.

RUSSIANS USING SKI TROOPS ON MOSCOW FRONT

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 — Quoting the Moscow radio, a British broadcast picked up by CBS said today that Russian ski troops have been active for the first time on the Moscow Front.

"For the first time the Russians have thrown ski troops into the Moscow fight. The battles are now being fought in deep snow and 45 degrees of frost," the British announcer said.

"Moscow radio, in a description of one of the first operations of the ski troops, told how they wiped out complete German units. Russian scouts had reported the opposition by German troops at a village on the Moscow Front. The order from the ski troop commander was to attack them and wipe them out."

"The Russians went ahead, camouflaged in white, and the machine guns mounted on their knees. They were able to pass round the enemy flank and attacked the Germans. Those who escaped were overtaken and killed by the bayonets of the skiers."

Men Leaving U. S. Army Should File Discharges

Eighteen Pickaway County men have been discharged from various branches of the army, according to Selective Service officials.

Practically all of the discharges were granted to men who are over 28 years old. Men who are granted discharges should have their original official discharges recorded at the Court House, Selective Service officials said.

Such discharges should be filed with the county recorder.

The local board also has warned registrants recently married that they must convince the local board that their marriage status was acquired in the ordinary course of human affairs and not for the purpose of avoiding training and service. When the latter is the case, registrants are placed in 1-A.

While the local draft board prepares to send ten men into service next Wednesday, unofficial reports have come from army headquarters that the local board will receive no more calls before the first of the year. Local board members have received no official notice regarding the matter.

You will recall that Bering strait was named in his honor. A glance at your map will show you further that Bering strait is a 56-mile, island-dotted strip of water dividing North America from Asia. The new press attack on the United States revived tension which previously had relaxed as a result of latest developments in Washington.

Meanwhile, Japan speeded preparations to bring her nationals home from Hong Kong, Malaya, British Borneo, Singapore and Mexico.

Kokumin published an eight-column article reviewing conditions in Asiatic countries and stating:

"Should the United States pursue its aggressive policy toward East Asia by attempting to fish in troubled waters without paying attention to anti-American and anti-British sentiment in the surging subject nations of southeastern and southwestern Asia, as well as the growing demand for racial self-determination, it must be reminded that 1,000,000,000 people of Asia would turn on the United States as irreconcilable foes."

Attitude Awaited
Meanwhile, Japanese officials awaited an "official" indication of the United States' attitude toward Japan's reply to President Roosevelt's request for an explanation of Japanese troop concentrations in French Indo-China.

Men Leaving U. S. Army Should File Discharges

Eighteen Pickaway County men have been discharged from various branches of the army, according to Selective Service officials.

Practically all of the discharges were granted to men who are over 28 years old. Men who are granted discharges should have their original official discharges recorded at the Court House, Selective Service officials said.

Such discharges should be filed with the county recorder.

The local board also has warned registrants recently married that they must convince the local board that their marriage status was acquired in the ordinary course of human affairs and not for the purpose of avoiding training and service. When the latter is the case, registrants are placed in J-1.

Registrants who prefer to enlist must do so before their first examination to report for final physical examination is mailed. However, once a registrant is inducted, he may enlist in the regular army if he chooses.

While the local draft board prepares to send ten men into service next Wednesday, unofficial reports have come from army headquarters that the local board will receive no more calls before the first of the year. Local board members have received no official notice regarding the matter.

Returned soldiers are Everett Alban, Columbus; Kenneth Edward Rowland, Circleville, Ezra Lee Pritchard, Circleville, Fred Marvin Harrington, Circleville, Wilbur Clapper, Orient, Alva Ellsworth Swank, Williamsport, Reuben Poland Clapper, Orient, William Gaines Hill, Circleville, Merle Thompson, Circleville, Walden E. DOUGLAS B-19 ALMOST READY FOR AIR CORPS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 6 — The $3,500,000 Douglas B-19 bomber, the largest military plane ever constructed, has completed its final test flight and today was undergoing a last check-up before being turned over to the Army Air Corps.

The 42-ton sky dreadnaught was flown to Los Angeles Municipal Airport near the Douglas Aircraft plant at El Segundo after a leisurely four hour flight from March Field.

The flight brought the total test hours to 43, 13 more than is required for governmental approval. Lieut. Col. Stanley M. Umstead, the army's chief test pilot who has piloted the B-19 ever since its initial flight last June, was again at the controls.

After final overhauling and a detailed check-up the huge plane will be flown to Wright Field, Dayton, O.

Greenfield Gains 29-21 Victory Over Tigers In League Contest

POORLY PLAYED HALF PUTS RED, BLACK BEHIND

Overtime After Rally
To Tie Score

A miserable first half which saw Greenfield McClain run up a 20-3 advantage cost Circleville High Tigers a South Central Ohio League game Friday evening, the McClain lads taking home a 29-21 margin. The Red and Black couldn't do anything in the proper manner in the first half when the Tiger offensive spent most of its time losing possession of the leather with dizzy one-handed hook shots from the various corners of the court.

But the second half was much more interesting, the Red and Black starting at the first whistle to cut into Greenfield's lead and keeping it up throughout the two quarters. McClain scored only two points in the third period, while Circleville ran up 11 to cut the margin to 22-14 as the last quarter started. The teams played even in this session, each getting seven points.

Fouls Prove Margin
Greenfield scored only one field goal more than the Tigers, but ability to hit from the free throw line proved the margin of victory. Eleven tosses were converted by Red Armstrong's proteges while only four were missed. Circleville scored five and missed nine, therefore a perfect evening at the charity line would have brought victory to the Circleville crew.

It was the work of the elongated Don Grate that saw McClain carry off the victory. This youngster who is one of the outstanding cagers to appear in a high school game here in a good many years did everything well. He is perfect ball handler, he is equally as good under the basket or away from it, and his defensive play is marvelous. He held Jim Moorehead, Tiger center, without a point for the simple reason that he didn't permit Moorehead to get into position for any shots.

Grate was held to 16 points, a low total for him and he connected only four times from the field, this, too, being under his usual accumulation. However, he strode to the foul line nine times and eight times the ball dropped through the net. Only One Grate Needed

The remainder of the Greenfield team was only ordinary, but a high school team needs only one Grate to be a powerhouse.

The Tigers were even with McClain foul once. Two Greenfield foul tosses were good before Geib hit for a bucket from the side to tie it up. But from that point Greenfield went to town. Only one other Circleville point was scored in the first half.

Bob Moon, who has shown class in both of Circleville's games as a scorer, paced the Tigers with nine points, all coming in the last half.

Circleville reserves dropped a heartbreaker, 26-24, in a double overtime game with McClain. Taylor, invading forward, getting a bucket after one minute and 35 seconds in a sudden death session. Play had ended at 24-all, and a three minute period failed to break the deadlock.

Dade Leads Reserves
McClain held a 22-14 edge as the last quarter started, but the Tigers paced by Emmitt Dade, cut into this margin until Dade tied up the contest with a free toss with only seven seconds to play.

Circleville plays twice next week, traveling to London Friday night and Grove City Saturday night.

Probability that next week's practices will be concentrated on offense is seen since the Tigers scored only 18 points on Lancaster and 21 on Greenfield. The defense has done well in both contests, holding Lancaster to 22 and McClain to 29. There are few basketball teams capable of holding Greenfield to less than 30 points in any one's league.

BIERMAN WORKS HARD ON DETAIL TO BUILD CHAMPS

By Graham Hovey
CHICAGO, Dec. 6—Hard work; strict attention to detail; keen football judgment; sensible use of psychology.

Those are the qualities which make Bernie Bierman one of the nation's top-flight football coaches. Bernie's boss said so today, between sessions of the Big Ten conference meeting in Chicago.

You might imagine that Minnesota's director of athletics, Frank G. McCormick, would be just a mite jealous of the acclaim which goes almost every football season to his No. 1 hired hand, Bernie Bierman. Well, you can banish the thought.

Frank McCormick is content to remain out of the spotlight and do a good job of directing Minnesota's athletic program while Bernie coaches national championship football teams. But no one is prouder of those teams than McCormick. And no one appreciates the job Bernie is doing any more than his boss.

"Bernie is a tireless worker," said Frank. "He drives himself harder than he ever has driven one of his teams, and despite his success he never gives up in his efforts to make himself even a better football coach."

"That aptitude for hard work has made him a master of detail. I've heard that one of Bernie's coaching colleagues says his success is due to the strict attention he gives to the finest detail and that certainly is a major factor. He overlooks nothing."

YAFETTEVILLE, Ark., Dec. 6—The University of Arkansas football team won but two games while losing nine this fall but scored 105 points to its opponent 143.

Ashville Defeats Pickaway In County Feature

LEADERSHIP IN LEAGUE GOES TO BRONCO QUINTET

Guards Pace Victors, 36-26;
Washington Turns Back
New Holland Five

Ashville High School's hard-driving varsity swept over the previously unbeaten Pickaway Pirates to assume the lead in the Pickaway County Basketball League. The Broncos are as yet unbeaten, Darby Township being the only other team in the league with a clean slate. The Ashville youths have played twice more than have the Derby youngsters, thus they hold the top spot.

The first half of the Ashville-Pickaway game was a hard-fought one, the first period ending 8-8 and the half finding the Broncos with a three point edge, 16-13. The superiority of the winners started to show in the third canto, which ended 27-20, and Ashville continued to pull away in the last session.

The work of the Ashville guards, Wilson and Nance, was important to the outcome of the joust, these lads adding up 20 of their team's total, while Wilson also had time to hold the high-scoring Freddie Immelt to a bucket and a free toss. Pickaway suffered a telling blow when Hildenbrand, capable forward, was waved to the bench on personal fouls in the second period.

Ashville reserves made the evening unanimous with a 35-24 victory.

New Holland Loses
Washington, beaten last week by Walnut, came back with a vengeance to win 35-27 from New Holland's Bulldogs on the Circleville High court. Washington had a five point edge at the half, 17-12.

Williamsport went over to Atlanta to score a 40-25 victory although the Deer Creek boys were outplayed in the first half, 14 to 12. Kenny Wright, center, got going in the last two quarters to run up seven buckets.

Walnut and Jackson engaged in a roughie, the former winning 18-12 on the Fox Postoffice court. Neither team scored in the first period, while Walnut held a 6-5 halftime advantage.

Monroe's youths, riddled by graduation, remained in the victorious column by dropping a home court engagement, 12-27, to Scioto. The Scioto lads were well balanced and had a lot of snap in running up their total.

Darby Over London
Darby Township, rated as one of the superior teams in the county this year, surprised its followers by traveling to London to knock off a 30-22 victory. All members of the Darby varsity added to the total. London, a Circleville High foe next Friday on the Madison County court, had been going great guns all season, but Darby took care of the Red Raiders' record.

Salt Creek didn't play nice with Madison Mills, taking the out-of-the-county team into camp by a 31-29 score on the Pickaway County court. Salt Creek led 18-12 at the half, but had difficulty in holding an advantage.

Strous, forward, topped the scorers with 13 points.

BIG TEN CHIEFS NEARING CLOSE OF THEIR MEET

CHICAGO, Dec. 6—Coaches, athletic directors and faculty representatives of the Big Ten conference swung into the closing of their winter meeting in Chicago today after an opening session marked entirely by routine business.

Although the subject of subsidization reportedly was discussed by the delegates in private conversations, it was not brought into the open during official deliberations.

Among the chief items of business completed yesterday were assigning of the 1942 indoor conference track meet to the University of Chicago on March 6 and 7; the outdoor meet to Northwestern University on May 29 and 30; and the swimming meet to the University of Michigan for March 13 and 14; the tennis meet to Ohio State for May 21 to 23, and golf meet to Michigan for May 22 and 23.

The conference track coaches for the second year recommended to the athletic directors that the javelin throw be eliminated from the outdoor track program.

Tennis, baseball and golf schedules for 1942 were drawn up at sessions of coaches in those sports.

Army Air Corps or the Naval Reserve.

Feller, who won 25 games for the Indians last season, said he would announce his choice of services at the annual meeting of the Major Leagues, which opens Monday in Chicago. Friends in Des Moines said they believed the fireball artist would choose the Navy as the result of a recent conference he had with Lieut. Commander Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, who now directs the Navy's physical training program.

Bob was due to be drafted in Cleveland next month.

BASEBALL TALK MOVES TO WEST

Olsen's Record As Ohio Coach Outstanding One
Major League Meeting To Open; Little Business Finished In South

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 6—Baseball's winter trades winds, which were no more than a breeze during the four-day Minor League convention here, blew toward Chicago today.

With the winds and talk of trades went a majority of the diamond moguls for the annual winter meeting of the Major Leagues next week in the windy city.

Indications were that more than one headline deal will be transacted at the Major League huddle.

This was evidenced by continued negotiations between the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers, among others. The Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago clubs in the National League also reportedly are prepared for transactions as are the Detroit Tigers, St. Louis Browns, Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox in the American circuit.

The Dodgers definitely want a third baseman and a left-handed pitcher. The Giants want a catcher.

Business of the Minor Leagues was completed with the election of Dr. E. M. Wilder of Augusta, Ga., as chairman of the national executive committee. The final day was without noteworthy exchange of players.

Deb Garms, Pittsburgh outfielder, was sold to Sacramento of the Pacific Coast league.

The Dodgers announced they had signed Pitcher Kirby Higbe, a 20-game winner, for 1942. Higbe, attending the sessions here, chimed in that the Brooklyn lads had raised his pay.

Clyde Sukeforth signed a new contract as manager of Montreal in the International loop. The Lancaster, Pa., club of the Interstate League hired Tom Oliver, former Wilmington skipper, to direct the club next season and announced the purchase of Pitcher Robert Cash from El Paso and Outfielder George Callos, a Texas League slugger.

Columbus of the American Association bought Pep Young, the infielder, from Sacramento. Richmond, Va., of the Piedmont League signed Ben Chapman, released by the White Sox, as playing manager.

The Wilmington club purchased four players from Selma, Ala., of the Southeastern League. They were Pitcher Roy Pritchett, Outfielders Joe Mene and Marvin Panton and Infielder Ben Hasler. Wilmington also acquired Infielder Bob Pritchard from Charlotte, N. C.

Highlights of the huddle, however, was the appointment of Outfielder Mel Ott as manager of the New York Giants and the Giants' move, involving Pitcher Bob Bowman and undisclosed cash, to get Outfielder Hank Leiber back from the Chicago Cubs.

Couldn't we have domestic neutrality for a while, and everybody just be American?

Olsen's Record As Ohio Coach Outstanding One

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6—Harold G. Olsen, Ohio State University basketball coach, has a record over the last ten seasons that would be pointed to with pride by any coach in the country. In that decade, Buckeye cage squads have chalked up 124 victories, and have lost 74 times, for a percentage of .626.

In that period, two Western Conference titles have been won. The first in 1932-33, was shared with Northwestern by a team which had a season's record of 17 wins and three defeats. The second title came in 1938-39, when Jimmy Hull's inspirational leadership set the Bucks on fire and they went on to a Conference crown and became runner-up for national honors.

Olsen's teams are always heavy scoring outfits. In the last ten seasons they have outscored the opposition by a total of 7,179 points to 4,629.

Ohio State's basketball team will meet the cagers from Great Lakes Naval Reserve Training Station next Friday night in the Fairgrounds Coliseum.

Stars In Lineup
The Naval team which will open the Buckeyes' season could be called Uncle Sam's All-Stars, for the roster includes several All-Americans and other basketball stars of the first magnitude.

Among them is Frankie Baumholtz, the boy who led Ohio University to its outstanding season's record last year and climaxed his career with a great one-man show in Madison Square Garden during the Invitational Tournament to win All-American honors.

Bill Menke, who holds the all-time scoring record at Indiana and once marked up 31 points in a single game, and Ernie Andres, who was an All-America guard at Indiana are on the squad. Dick Klein, runner-up for Big Ten scoring honors while at Northwestern, and Jim Currie, his college teammate; Forrest Anderson, successor to the great Luisetti at Stanford, and an all-Pacific Coast star; Bob Calihan of Detroit University, once voted the best player in Michigan; and Bob White, former Dartmouth captain and all-Eastern League performer one year, are other members of the team.

Ohio State will donate all proceeds of the game above actual expenses to the Naval Relief Fund.

The idea of an Eskimo publishing a book seems strange to people who imagine them to be uncultured. Most of the 50,000 Eskimos alive today have been to school and all of them are acquainted with the work of Hans Lyne, the most famous Eskimo author, publisher and playwright.

FAUROT TO STAY IN MISSOURI AT HIGHER SALARY

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 6—"Missouri for Missourians" was the battle cry of Don Faurot when he came up from Kirkville Teachers College in 1935 to rejuvenate the football fortunes of his alma mater, the University of Missouri.

Today, Faurot had followed his own advice by signing for his eighth year as head coach of the Tigers, currently pointing for a Sugar Bowl game with Fordham, following a season in which they won the Big Six championship and were defeated only by Ohio State

The Nature and Work of the Church

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Newman Campbell
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for December 7 is Matt. 16:13-20; 18:15-20; Acts 2:37-47; 8:1; 9:31; I Cor. 7:17; 12:4-31; Gal. 1:13; 21-24; Eph. 1:15-23; 4:1-16; 5:25-27; Rev. 1:10, 11, the Golden Text being Eph. 5:25, "Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself up for it.")

UNITY IS a word we hear spoken again and again in our modern world. We must have unity in our nation, unity in family life, and to do the best work of religion we must have unity in our churches.

The word "church" is first used in the New Testament when Christ told His disciples, "on this rock I will build My church." He had asked them whom men said He was: They had answered that some thought He was John the Baptist, others that He was one of the prophets. Then He turned to them and asked: "But whom say ye that I am?" And Simon Peter, always ready with an answer, said "Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God."

The answer pleased Jesus, and He called Peter blessed, "for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven."

In the 18th chapter of Matthew Jesus tells how His church is to be conducted. If a brother in the church should wrong another the one injured should first go to him privately and tell him of it. "If he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother." In other words, if he listened and atoned for his wrong doing, nothing more was to be done, of course; if not, the one injured was to take two or three of the brethren with him and try to win the man to repentance. If he still was obdurate, the church organization was to be informed, but if he refused to listen to the church, he should be outlawed from the organization. In other words, he was to be approached with all love and forbearance, and only if he was obdurate to all pleadings was he to be expelled from the fellowship.

Peter Preaches Repentance
Another phase of the fellowship in the early church is told in Acts 2, verses 37 to 47. Peter had been speaking to the multitude and had so eloquently related the story of Jesus' life, death and resurrection, that all who heard him were much moved, and asked what they should do. Peter answered that they should repent and be baptized. A great many joined the Christians, and "all that believed were together, and had things common"; they "sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need."

FIVE COUNTIANS WILL SPEAK SUNDAY EVENING

The annual Prince of Peace Declaration contest, to be conducted at First Methodist Church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. will see five pupils from Pickaway County schools compete for the county award.

The contest will be held in the auditorium of the church, the Rev. R. S. Meyer of the Williamsport church being general chairman.

A silver medal will be awarded the winner, who also will represent the county in the district contest. The Prince of Peace contests are sponsored annually by the Ohio Council of Churches.

Contestants will be Erma R. Bowers, Ashville; Bertha Painter, Commercial Point; Junior Stuckey, Monore Chapel; Eugene Hall, Emmett's Chapel; and June Miller, Salem Church.

sessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need."

Many communities have since tried this manner of living, and usually they have been failures over long periods of time, but in these early days and in the simple way these men then lived, each shared his all with the others. It was an ideal life while it was practical and while love and unity ruled. And it was following this incident that Paul related that at this time the "churches had spread throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied."

Writing to the Corinthians, Paul tells what is the function of men in the church. The church he likens to a human body, and the members to the parts of the body. The body has need of all these parts and cannot function without them, and the parts need the body or they would die. So each man can make his peculiar contribution to the church and thus make it a rich and inspiring thing.

Paul refers often in his writing to the fact that he persecuted Christians relentlessly before his conversion. He tells in Galatians 1 how after his change of heart he was unknown to the people of certain churches, but how they rejoiced that the one who had persecuted them was now an earnest worker with them, and "they glorified God in me," he concludes.

As a "prisoner of the Lord," Paul beseeches the Ephesians to "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called. With all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love. Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

"One Lord, one faith, one baptism. One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

Not as children, not knowing our own minds and being swayed this way and that is our spiritual life, Paul says, but "speaking the truth in love, we may grow up into Him in all things, which is the head, even Christ."

Sometimes, sad to say, there is dissension in the Christian church. It never should be, but human beings are weak and forget. The ideal toward which all Christians are working is this love and unity which is so eloquently set forth.

Some Funerals I Would Like to Attend

Rev. Maurice E. Culver
Commercial Point,
Methodist Church

If tomorrow we were to read in the headlines of our newspapers the words Hitler Is Dead, what would be our reaction? There would undoubtedly follow in the story under that headline the report that the Czechs, the Poles, the Slavs, the Greeks, the Russians, and the English and the French had special demonstrations and parades. The dictator oppressor would be dead. And if you or I were to get an invitation to attend the funeral of Adolf Hitler what celebrities we would consider ourselves to be. We would feel that we were attending the funeral of the greatest incarnation of blood-thirstiness, and ruthlessness, and murderous passion that had ever lived. There would not be many in so called enemy countries that would not rejoice that Hitler was dead.

But there are some of us that feel that we would rather see Hitler have a funeral within himself than to be literally dead and buried and never to be heard from again. What would Hitler be like if such things died in him as selfish ambition, indifference to human rights and the numerous other objections we have against him? He might even be alright to have in your home.

The great apostle Paul said, "I die daily." There was a daily death to anything that might appear self-centered in his life. There are a lot of that kind of funerals that folks in the community would like to attend, when some man or woman has a funeral in their own heart for a lot of the selfishness and indifference and sin that lives there.

I would like to be present at the funeral when the merchantmen of some of our towns bury their mercenary spirit that keeps their stores open to do business on the Sabbath day. I would like to see a merchant on his knees asking Jesus Christ to destroy such self-interest in his heart and take it from him and bury it in the great sea of God's forgetfulness without even the trace of a tomb stone to mark the place save only to write an epitaph indelibly within his soul where that self-centeredness was taken away saying, "Freed by Divine Grace." And I would rejoice on the next Sabbath day to see that mercant walk into the House of God to worship his Redeemer.

I would like to be present at the funeral when the mothers and fathers of our community bury their indifference that keeps them from having authority and discipline in their homes. I would like to see a mother and a father on their knees together asking Christ to officiate at the burial ceremony of their weaknesses. The recent survey of the Pickaway County schools reveals that only 25 percent of our children are attending Sunday School. But this percentage shall be greatly increased when the funerals of parental indifference take place, and once more our church pews will be filled with families, and our homes will be Christ centered. Come, mothers and fathers, let us bury our weaknesses and assume our responsibilities.

Another funeral I would like to attend would be that in which some young man or young woman goes out to the field of service to bury his madness for pleasure. The most fed-up people we know are the people most bent on being happy. They have to jump from one thing to another in order not to be bored to tears with themselves. They are saying themselves what the old lady said to the frightened child whom she shook him till his teeth rattled, "Now enjoy yourself, do you understand, I brought you here to enjoy yourself—now do it!" Such young people have missed the way. I would like to be present when one places his hand in the nail-scarred hand of Jesus and says, "Lead me to where I can forget my happiness, and let me help thee try to make someone else happy." And out in the field of service, with self-desire buried and forgotten, I'm certain that I shall see a truly happy young person.

There is a reason why I personally would like to attend such funerals as these, I have been to some just like them before, and I know what the persons are like afterward, for life is different when self dies within and Jesus comes to reign.

Some Funerals I Would Like to Attend

Rev. Maurice E. Culver
Commercial Point,
Methodist Church

If tomorrow we were to read in the headlines of our newspapers the words Hitler is Dead, what would be our reaction? There would undoubtedly follow in the story under that headline the report that the Czechs, the Poles, the Slavs, the Greeks, the Russians, and the English and the French had special demonstrations and parades. The dictator oppressor would be dead. And if you or I were to get an invitation to attend the funeral of Adolf Hitler what celebrities would we consider ourselves to be. We would feel that we were attending the funeral of the greatest incarnation of blood-thirstiness and ruthlessness, and murderous passion that had ever lived. There would not be many in so called enemy countries that would not rejoice that Hitler was dead.

But there are some of us that feel that we would rather see Hitler have a funeral within himself than to be literally dead and buried and never to be heard from again. What would Hitler be like if such things died in him as selfish ambition, indifference to human rights and the numerous other objections we have against him? He might even be alright to have in your home.

The great apostle Paul said, "I die daily." There was a daily death to anything that might appear self-centered in his life. There are a lot of that kind of funerals that folks in the community would like to attend, when some man or woman has a funeral in their own heart for a lot of the selfishness and indifference and sin that lives there.

I would like to be present at the funeral when the merchantmen of some of our towns bury their mercenary spirit that keeps their stores open to do business on the Sabbath day. I would like to see a merchant on his knees asking Jesus Christ to destroy such self-interest in his heart and take it from him and bury it in the great sea of God's forgetfulness without.

This article is one of a series being written by members of the Pickaway County Ministerial Association.

even the trace of a tomb stone to mark the place save only to write an epitaph indelibly within his soul where that self-centeredness was taken away saying, "Freed by Divine Grace." And I would rejoice on the next Sabbath day to see that mercant walk into the House of God to worship his Redeemer.

I would like to be present at the funeral when the mothers and fathers of our community bury their indifference that keeps them from having authority and discipline in their homes. I would like to see a mother and a father on their knees together asking Christ to officiate at the burial ceremony of their weaknesses. The recent survey of the Pickaway County schools reveals that only 25 percent of our children are attending Sunday School. But this percentage shall be greatly increased when the funerals of parental indifference take place, and once more our church pews will be filled with families, and our homes will be Christ centered. Come, mothers and fathers, let us bury our weaknesses and assume our responsibilities.

Another funeral I would like to attend would be that in which some young man or young woman goes out to the field of service to bury his madness for pleasure. The most fed-up people we know are the people most bent on being happy. They have to jump from one thing to another in order not to be bored to tears with themselves. They are saying themselves what the old lady said to the frightened child whom she had taken to the circus, as she shook him till his teeth rattled, "Now enjoy yourself, do you understand, I brought you here to enjoy yourself—now do it!" Such young people have missed the way. I would like to be present when one places his hand in the nail-scarred hand of Jesus and says, "Lead me to where I can forget my happiness, and let me help thee try to make someone else happy." And out in the field of service, with self-desire buried and forgotten, I'm certain that I shall see a truly happy young person.

There is a reason why I personally would like to attend such funerals as these, I have been to some just like them before, and I know what the persons are like afterward, for life is different when self dies within and Jesus comes to reign.

PLANS WILL BE MADE FOR FARM BUREAU SESSION

Plans for the annual Pickaway County Farm Bureau Roll Call will be made and a date set for the annual Farm Bureau meeting will be set when directors of the Farm Bureau meet in their office on East Main Street Saturday night.

The Pickaway County Farm Bureau now has 422 paid members, and next year officials of the organization will make an effort to substantially increase the enrollment. During the last year business of the Farm Bureau is as big or bigger than it ever has been, Miss Ethel Brobst, Farm Bureau secretary reports, although final figures have not yet been computed.

Also included in the business meeting scheduled for Saturday evening will be reports from local Farm Bureau delegates to the Farm Bureau Federation meeting in Columbus. Reports will be made by E. H. Fetherolf and H. N. Stevenson.

While the Farm Bureau is making plans for the coming year the Pickaway Grain Company announced completion of a building program at its plant on Western Avenue. A 14 by 18 foot office building has been added and a bookkeeper will be employed to better handle the business at the plant.

A WAR OF MACHINES

IT IS a mechanized war in a mechanized world. The way this mechanization spreads is astonishing. News comes from Delhi, India, that in addition to Indian troops already serving in the British forces of the Near and Middle East, there is now being formed in India a new army which will soon contain a million men. And it will have "a remarkable proportion of technical personnel."

Kipling would be deeply interested in a big army of Sikhs, Afghans and Burmans, and so on, with modern weapons and tanks and mechanized units and warplanes and all the rest of war's modern panoply.

The Russians themselves have astonished the world lately by the evidences of their own mechanization. Only 20 years ago they were a vast nation of illiterate peasants, mostly too primitive to handle any tool more complex than a hammer or spade or hoe. Today they are not only able to read and write but to handle effectively all the immensely varied and complex mechanism of modern warfare, and fighting even the highly mechanized Germans to a standstill.

It is certainly going to be a world of machines and kilowatts and gadgets when this war is over, and the "poor benighted heathen" will be in the game along with the rest of us.

PLEDGE FOR AMERICANS

IN THE last paragraph of the Declaration of Independence is a pledge which citizens today might well repeat thoughtfully. That paragraph contains the actual independence declaration and ends with these solemn words:

"And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor."

So far, in the grave dangers that threaten the nation today, most of us have pledged only so much of our lives as we normally spend at work for which we are paid, so much of our fortunes as the tax laws require. As for our sacred honor, a great many have not got around yet to recognizing that it is involved.

The signers and defenders of the Declaration made no reservations in their pledge or their fulfillment of it. They went "all-out" for freedom. Do we today not understand the perils our freedom faces, or are we not worthy of it?

Cartoonist Bruce Bairnsfather's soldier had the right idea—a pincers movement with one arm coming down from Spitzbergen to meet another coming up from Dakar to pinch the Nazis inside.

Found nothing startling in the morning prints, so turned to full enjoyment of the breakfast coffee. Then away to the post where did pass the time of day with John Boggs and pick up a great bundle of mail, little of which was of importance. "Call him Sam," said Max, and I did. One customer at the counter, who apparently had no like for kittens, wished to christen him with a bottle of Coca Cola, but Sam left when I did, his head sticking out of my topcoat pocket. Tried to give him away for half an hour, but no one wanted him, so I took Sam out to my house. He's waiting there for his real owner, if he has one.

RUSSIAN PHENOMENON OF POLITICS

WASHINGTON — Six months ago the National Conference of the Soviet Communist Party met in Moscow. For nearly a year Russia had played Hitler's game. Anti-Hitler Communists were in bad odor. In especially bad odor was Maxim Maximovich Litvinoff, one-time foreign minister.

Of Jewish parentage, Litvinoff was thoroughly out of sympathy with the Nazi regime. Married to a British wife, he also favored cooperation with Great Britain, not Germany. So his wife was in exile in Siberia, and he himself had been stripped of his duties in the foreign office and relegated to an obscure membership on the Central Communist Committee.

At this meeting of the National Party Conference, however, Litvinoff was stripped even of his committee membership. He was ousted on the grounds of "inability to discharge obligations."

Probably it is typical of the ups and downs of Russian politics that six months after this lowest point in Litvinoff's career, he should become Ambassador to the nation upon whose future policy the fate of Russia largely depends.

TOUGH PARTY WORKER

Maxim Litvinoff was born 65 years ago in Bialystok, a town in Russian Poland, now occupied by Germany. His real name was Meer Genokh Movsheer Vallakh, but he has adopted a long row of "Party" nicknames — Papasha, Luvinye, Felike, and Nits—together with an equal assortment of assumed names—David Mordecai Finklestein, Litvinoff Harrison, M. G. Harrison, Buckman and Gustav Graf.

Each of those names represents a chapter in a life which has been as tough and colorful as any man's in Russia. Like everyone who has forged to the front of the Soviet Government, Litvinoff came up the hard way—every inch of it. After a typical Russian high school education, he joined the army at the age of 17 and served for five years. It was during his military service that he became interested in socialism. And when he got out, he immediately began to propagandize for the Russian Revolutionary Democratic Party.

By the time he was 24 he had become a member of the Bolshevik central committee in Kiev, and a year later, in 1901, he was arrested and sentenced to exile in Siberia. Before he could be sent to Siberia, however, Litvinoff escaped and fled to Switzerland.

The next fifteen years of Litvinoff's life were spent in very dangerous visits to Russia or in the company of Stalin, Lenin, Trotsky and other exiles in Switzerland, France and England.

Once, in 1906, Litvinoff turned up in Paris with a huge batch of Russian paper money which the Communists of the Caucasus, under the leadership of Stalin, had seized in a raid on the Czar's treasury in Tiflis. It was Litvinoff's job to change the money into smaller denominations and distribute it to party members in Paris. But he was caught with some of the money on him and expelled from France.

Twice during his years in exile he sent ships loaded with munitions to Russia to start revolution, but in both cases the ships were sunk.

Best Hospital Care for Folks of Slender Means

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am in receipt of an account of the operation of the Baker Memorial Hospital in Boston for people of moderate means. This report covers the period of its existence from 1930 to 1933.

The idea of a hospital where people of moderate means could have access to modern skills in diagnosis and treatment was suggested as long ago as 1910 by Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, Director of Massachusetts General Hospital. In 1924 Mrs. Mary Richardson contributed a generous gift for such a hospital in memory of her parents, Richard Baker, Jr., and Ellen Maria Baker.

For Those of Slender Means
The idea of the hospital hardly needs any elaboration beyond the mere statement of its purpose. "People of moderate means" which is a sufficiently understandable designation, were receiving less efficient care in the case of sickness than others of the community.

Self-respect prevented them from applying for free ward care and their resources would not permit them to apply to a private hospital for treatment where rates must necessarily be higher since the private hospital must be self-supporting. The result was that their physicians were not able to give them the benefit of all the modern resources of diagnosis, examination and treatment.

Satisfactory Record
Such was the theory and what over theoretical objection the medical profession may have to it, the record of the hospital for ten years has been entirely satisfactory.

The patient at the Baker Memorial Hospital pays from $4.50 to $6.00 a day according to the desirability of the room. Insurance cases in the nine-bed ward pay $6.00 to $24 per week and patients with tuberculosis pay the same. The laboratory fee for special procedures is $10, X-ray from $5.00 to $50. Routine laboratory work not of a special character is included in the fee for a room.

The staff of physicians and surgeons agree upon an upper limit of $150, payable by any patient for medical and surgical service. The average fee is about $70 for each patient.

Nursing Service Excellent
In 1933 there was an average of 298 patients a day and during the year there were 573 births. There were over 3,000 surgical operations and 1,600 medical patients.

In a questionnaire sent to patients the replies showed that 94 per cent of patients were satisfied and often enthusiastic about the nursing service. Only about 12 per cent of the replies expressed criticisms of the coffee, radio service, time of meals or other details.

The payment of the attending physician or surgeon through the hospital was approved as fair and convenient by most of the patients. About one-third said they would not have known otherwise how to secure hospital care.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
A. W. G., Los Angeles, Calif.:—"Please state in your column if saccharin used in tea and coffee causes dizziness or is harmful in any other way."

Answer: No. The effect of saccharin has been thoroughly investigated and even when taken in large quantities over long periods of time it does no harm.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"BUT WE must know," Miss Alice was telling Fred, "that our Susan wouldn't let success go to her head."

"And suppose she should—fall in love with some man up in New York," said Fred. "You know, some fellow who—who—rushes her around and shows her the sights."

"Only a flighty girl would do that," said Miss Alice. "Susan's not like that. That is, she never was here in Ardendale."

"That's just the point! She may get a lot of new ideas while she's up there."

"Stop crossing unhelpful bridges," said Miss Alice. She put a final flower into the basket she had filled, and straightened up. "Come on inside," she said, "and I'll give you a glass of nice cool sweet cider."

"Thanks!" said Fred. "I could do with a little stimulant. And you can show me where you want to put the radio. I'll connect it for you, and then I've got to hurry back to town. I think I've got a buyer for that Palmert street corner. One of the Pullman car lunchrooms, you know."

"You do beat all!" said Aunt Alice, admiringly. "You have your Grandpa Mosher's knack for selling things."

"Yes'm," said Fred. "Everything but myself."

"Shucks, boy, don't sound so gloomy."

"I FEEL gloomy. This trip of Susan's is liable to mess up my whole life."

"Nonsense! Go sell your lot, and then come back. I'll expect you around six-thirty."

"Yes'm," said Fred. "Everything but myself."

Mr. Jones pushed back his chair and got up.

"I'm going up to the broadcasting studio," he said. "I'll be back in an hour, if anyone should want me."

"Yes, sir."

Hardly had Mr. Jones left the room when Roy Leonard entered it. "Hiya, Irene," he said. "Let me have a copy of that newest publicity, will you?"

"I gave you a copy yesterday," said Irene crossly.

"I know. But I've misplaced it." Irene got the bound sheets of paper and handed them to Roy.

"How was Staten Island?" she asked.

"Wonderful," said Roy. "And if there ever was a natural, innocent girl, Susan Farmer is it."

"You, too," said Irene.

"What do you mean?"

"You and Mr. Jones. He's been looking moon-eyed all morning. I hope he doesn't let our little contest winner upset his domestic tranquility."

"Don't talk like a nut!" said Roy. "If you ask me," said Irene, "I'm the only sane person around here. The nuts are all of the masculine variety—moon-eyed over a girl who's putting on an act, or I'm no judge."

"Then you're no judge," said Roy. "And as for Susan upsetting the tranquility of the Jones domicile—that's impossible."

"Why so?"

"Because there's no tranquility there—to begin with."

Irene smiled in spite of herself. "I think," she said, "that you have something there." She held out her hand. "Sit down, Roy, and have a smoke with me. The boss won't be back for an hour."

"Sorry," said Roy. "I've got too much to do. I'm taking Susan to the photographers right away. She's undressing now."

"Undressing!" Irene exclaimed. "For heaven's sake!"

"I mean," said Roy, "she's in that vacant office getting into her sun-bonnet and gingham gown. We brought them down from the hotel with us."

"Oh!" said Irene. And then: "So she couldn't even come to the office from the hotel without you escorting her."

"I suppose she could have done so," said Roy. "But I thought the courteous thing to do was call for her."

"I'm glad," said Irene, "that there's one female around here who gets shown a little courtesy."

"My, you're touchy."

"Who wouldn't be?" Irene retorted. "But don't let me keep you. Trot along. And since you're playing nursemaid to Susan, you might checked. Gain will often materialize in unexpected ways during his or her lifetime.

Hints on Etiquette
It is not correct for a lay person to address a priest or minister as "Reverend." The Catholic priest should be called "Father," unless he has another title by which he should be addressed. A Protestant minister is greeted as "Mr. Jones," unless he is a DD., when he is called "Doctor."

Horoscope for Sunday
Elderly relatives will greatly benefit those who have birthdays today. Strange, peculiar circumstances and unexpected changes will also bring them gains. A happy year is foreseen for them, and they should make full use of it. Children born on this date will have remarkable intuitions, which they should follow, and psychic experiences. They will be exceedingly clever, popular and fortunate. Many voyages are prophesied for them.

A RATHER interesting and intriguing day is forecast from the most important planetary transits and mutual aspects. as well go further and play lady's maid, and button up her gingham gown.

"If you're trying to get me mad," said Roy, "you might as well give up. And if you were really fond of me, Irene, you'd help Susan with her buttons."

"Me?" said Irene.

"Yes, of course. Why not?" Irene suddenly got up.

"All right, I'll do it," she said. "I'll prove to you that I can be a good sport—in spite of being neglected."

"Thanks, Irene," said Roy, pleased. "Now you're acting like the sort of a girl a fellow can love."

They went out together. And a short time later Irene was in the vacant office with Susan.

"I suppose," she said, "that you wear dresses like this one most of the time when you're at home."

"Yes," said Susan. "They're so easily washed and ironed."

"Do you do them up yourself?"

A WAR OF MACHINES

IT IS a mechanized war in a mechanized world. The way this mechanization spreads is astonishing. News comes from Delhi, India, that in addition to Indian troops already serving in the British forces of the Near and Middle East, there is now being formed in India a new army which will soon contain a million men. And it will have "a remarkable proportion of technical personnel."

Kipling would be deeply interested in a big army of Sikhs, Afghans and Burmans, and so on, with modern weapons and tanks and mechanized units and warplanes and all the rest of war's modern panoply.

The Russians themselves have astonished the world lately by the evidences of their own mechanization. Only 20 years ago they were a vast nation of illiterate peasants, mostly too primitive to handle any tool more complex than a hammer or spade or hoe. Today they are not only able to read and write but to handle effectively all the immensely varied and complex mechanism of modern warfare, and fighting even the highly mechanized Germans to a standstill.

It is certainly going to be a world of machines and kilowatts and gadgets when this war is over, and the "poor benighted heathen" will be in the game along with the rest of us.

PLEDGE FOR AMERICANS

IN THE last paragraph of the Declaration of Independence is a pledge which citizens today might well repeat thoughtfully. That paragraph contains the actual independence declaration and ends with these solemn words:

"And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor."

So far, in the grave dangers that threaten the nation today, most of us have pledged only so much of our lives as we normally spend at work for which we are paid, so much of our fortunes as the tax laws require. As for our sacred honor, a great many have not got around yet to recognizing that it is involved.

The signers and defenders of the Declaration made no reservations in their pledge or their fulfillment of it. They went "all-out" for freedom. Do we today not understand the perils our freedom faces, or are we not worthy of it?

Cartoonist Bruce Bairnsfather's soldier had the right idea—a pincers movement with one arm coming down from Spitzbergen to meet another coming up from Dakar to pinch the Nazis inside.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another morning that was not of December at all. Everyone talking about Spring in the Fall and that we will pay for it one of these days. Maybe. When even the government forecasters with all their scientific devices sometimes fail in weather predictions I certainly can't place much reliance in rheumatism or a former broken bone.

Found nothing startling in the morning prints, so turned to full enjoyment of the breakfast coffee. Then away to the post where did pass the time of day with John Boggs and pick up a great bundle of mail, little of which was of importance. A reminder that I had missed the Rotary dinner, a delayed bill and a howdy from a friend in Canada on business and who reported: Streams and lakes frozen. Fishing no good. Glad you are not here."

Thomas R. Bell dropped in for a chat and announced that he is in the village for the Winter. Former sheriff here, being nominated for the office in 1909 at the last of the party conventions that were replaced by primaries. Served four years and then in 1914 left for Youngstown where he has been living.

Sam was at Court and Main Streets in the midst of heavy traffic and four times in rapid succession narrowly escaped being added to the automobile fatality list. Picked him up and carried him into Gallagher's where he really got his name. Max Friedman was there and asked his name. Replied that I had no way of knowing since he couldn't or wouldn't talk. "Call him Sam," said Max, and I did. One customer at the counter, who apparently had no like for kittens, wished to christen him with a bottle of Coca Cola, but Sam left when I did, his head sticking out of my topcoat pocket. Tried to give him away for half an hour, but no one wanted him, so I took Sam out to my house. He's waiting there for his real owner, if he has one.

RUSSIAN PHENOMENON OF POLITICS

WASHINGTON — Six months ago the National Conference of the Soviet Communist Party met in Moscow. For nearly a year Russia had played Hitler's game. Anti-Hitler Communists were in bad odor. In especially bad odor was Maxim Maximovich Litvinoff, one-time foreign minister.

Of Jewish parentage, Litvinoff was thoroughly out of sympathy with the Nazi regime. Married to a British wife, he also favored cooperation with Great Britain, not Germany. So his wife was in exile in Siberia, and he himself had been stripped of his duties in the foreign office and relegated to an obscure membership on the Central Communist Committee.

At this meeting of the National Party Conference, however, Litvinoff was stripped even of his committee membership. He was ousted on the grounds of "inability to discharge obligations."

Probably it is typical of the ups and downs of Russian politics that six months after this lowest point in Litvinoff's career, he should become Ambassador to the nation upon whose future policy the fate of Russia largely depends.

TOUGH PARTY WORKER

Maxim Litvinoff was born 65 years ago in Bialystok, a town in Russian Poland, now occupied by Germany. His real name was Meer Genokh Movsheer Vallakh, but he has adopted a long row of "Party" nicknames — Papasha, Luvinye, Felike, and Nits—together with an equal assortment of assumed names—David Mordecai Finklestein, Litvinoff Harrison, M. G. Harrison, Buckman and Gustav Graf.

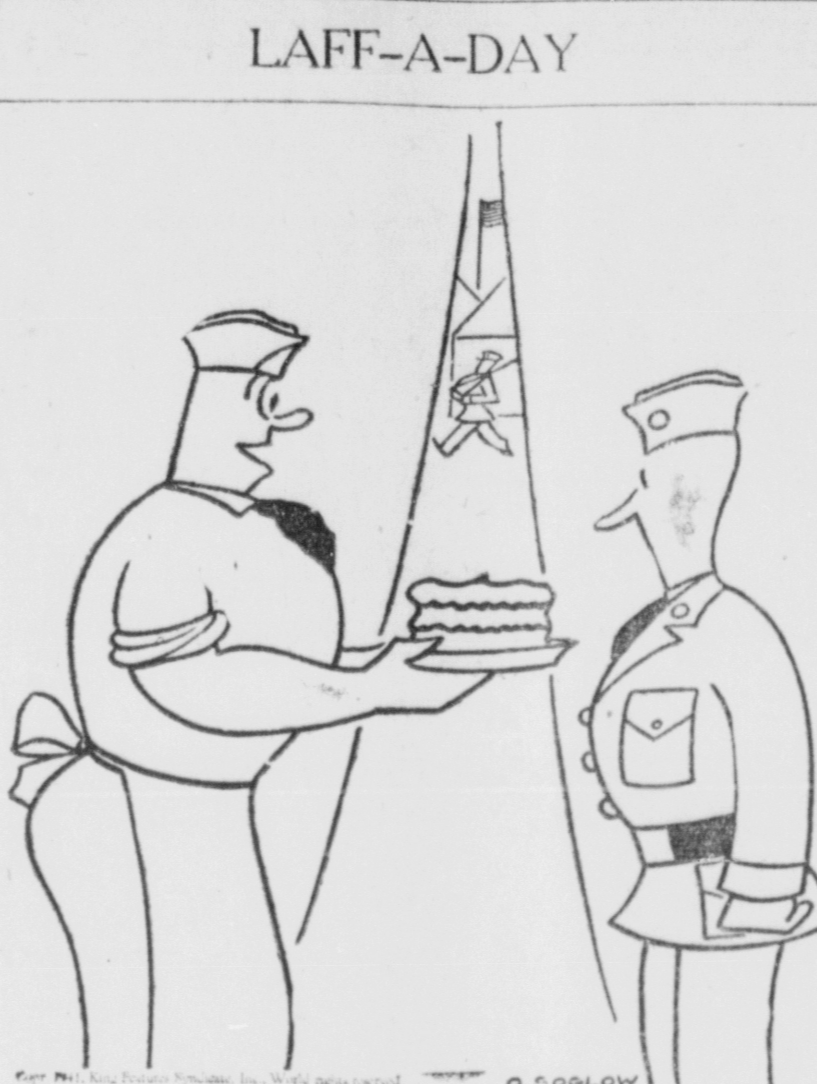

Each of those names represents a chapter in a life which has been as tough and colorful as any man's in Russia. Like everyone who has forged to the front of the Soviet Government, Litvinoff came up the hard way—every inch of it. After a typical Russian high school education, he joined the army at the age of 17 and served for five years. It was during his military service that he became interested in socialism. And when he got out, he immediately began to propagandize for the Russian Revolutionary Democratic Party.

By the time he was 24 he had become a member of the Bolshevik central committee in Kiev, and a year later, in 1901, he was arrested and sentenced to exile in Siberia. Before he could be sent to Siberia, however, Litvinoff escaped and fled to Switzerland.

The next fifteen years of Litvinoff's life were spent in very dangerous visits to Russia or in the company of Stalin, Lenin, Trotsky and other exiles in Switzerland, France and England.

Once, in 1906, Litvinoff turned up in Paris with a huge batch of Russian paper money which the Communists of the Caucasus, under the leadership of Stalin, had seized in a raid on the Czar's treasury in Tiflis. It was Litvinoff's job to change the money into smaller denominations and distribute it to party members in Paris. But he was caught with some of the money on him and expelled from France.

Twice during his years in exile he sent ships loaded with munitions to Russia to start revolution, but in both cases the ships were sunk.

Best Hospital Care for Folks of Slender Means

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am in receipt of an account of the operation of the Baker Memorial Hospital in Boston for people of moderate means. This report covers the period of its existence from 1930 to 1939.

The idea of a hospital where people of moderate means could have access to modern skills in diagnosis and treatment was suggested as long ago as 1910 by Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, Director of Massachusetts General Hospital. In 1924 Mrs. Mary Richardson contributed a generous gift for such a hospital in memory of her parents, Richard Baker, Jr., and Ellen Maria Baker.

For Those of Slender Means
The idea of the hospital hardly needs any elaboration beyond the mere statement of its purpose. "People of moderate means" which is a sufficiently understandable designation, were receiving less efficient care in the case of sickness than others of the community.

Self-respect prevented them from applying for free ward care and their resources would not permit them to apply to a private hospital for treatment where rates must necessarily be higher since the private hospital must be self-supporting. The result was that their physicians were not able to give them the benefit of all the modern resources of diagnosis, examination and treatment.

Satisfactory Record
Such was the theory and what-over theoretical objection the medical profession may have to it, the record of the hospital for ten years has been entirely satisfactory. The patient at the Baker Memorial Hospital pays from $4.50 to $6.00 a day according to the desirability of the room. Insurance cases in the nine-bed ward pay $6.00 to $24 per week and patients with tuberculosis pay the same. The laboratory fee for special procedures is $10, X-ray from $5.00 to $50. Routine laboratory work not of a special character is included in the fee for a room.

The staff of physicians and surgeons agree upon an upper limit of $150, payable by any patient for medical and surgical service. The average fee is about $70 for each patient.

Nursing Service Excellent
In 1939 there was an average of 208 patients a day and during the year there were 573 births. There were over 3,000 surgical operations and 1,600 medical patients.

In a questionnaire sent to patients the replies showed that 94 per cent of patients were satisfied and often enthusiastic about the nursing service. Only about 12 per cent of the replies expressed criticisms of the coffee, radio service, time of meals or other details. The payment of the attending physician or surgeon through the hospital was approved as fair and convenient by most of the patients. About one-third said they would not have known otherwise how to secure hospital care.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
A. W. G., Los Angeles, Calif.: "Please state in your column if saccharin used in tea and coffee causes dizziness or is harmful in any other way."

Answer: No. The effect of saccharin has been thoroughly investigated and even when taken in large quantities over long periods of time it does no harm.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Locking Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

"BUT WE must know," Miss Alice was telling Fred, "that our Susan wouldn't let success go to her head."

"And suppose she should—er—fall in love with some man up in New York," said Fred. "You know, some fellow who—who—rushes her around and shows her the sights."

"Only a flighty girl would do that," said Miss Alice. "Susan's not like that. That is, she never was here in Ardendale."

"That's just the point! She may get a lot of new ideas while she's up there."

"Stop crossing unhelpful bridges," said Miss Alice. She put a final flower into the basket she had filled, and straightened up. "Come on inside," she said, "and I'll give you a glass of nice cool sweet cider."

"Thanks!" said Fred. "I could do with a little stimulant. And you can show me where you want to put the radio. I'll connect it for you, and then I've got to hurry back to town. I think I've got a buyer for that Palmetto street corner. One of these Pullman car lunchrooms, you know."

"You do beat all!" said Aunt Alice, admiringly. "You have your Grandpa Mosher's knack for selling things."

"Yes'm," said Fred. "Everything but myself."

"Shucks, boy, don't sound so gloomy."

"I FEEL gloomy. This trip of Susan's is liable to mess up my whole life."

"Nonsense! Go sell your lot, and then come back. I'll expect you around six-thirty."

"Yes'm."

Miss Alice bustled into the house—Fred at her heels.

And up in New York there still was much activity in the vicinity of Dainty Diana Dairies headquarters.

Irene Carter, frowning, rather at odds with the world and everyone in it, was sitting at her machine. She was getting out more letters about the Dainty Diana Dairies products—writing what seemed to her to be endless paragraphs about her to be endless paragraphs about her.

"Typical Farmer's Daughter who soon was to become Dainty Diana—the dairy's trademark; a girl in gingham gown and sunbonnet, smiling as she held a milk pail."

"Triple!" said Irene, half aloud. "What's that?" said Mr. Jones, looking up from his mail.

"Nothing," said Irene. "Then don't talk to yourself," said Mr. Jones. "It's a bad habit."

"Yes, sir."

Hints on Etiquette
It is not correct for a lay person to address a priest or minister as "Reverend." The Catholic priest should be called "Father," unless he has another title by which he should be addressed. A Protestant minister is greeted as "Mr. Jones," unless he is a D.D., when he is called "Doctor."

Mr. Jones pushed back his chair and got up.

"I'm going up to the broadcasting studio," he said, "I'll be back in an hour, if anyone should want me."

"Yes, sir."

Hardly had Mr. Jones left the room when Roy Leonard entered it. "Hi'ya, Irene," he said. "Let me have a copy of that newest publicity, will you?"

"I gave you a copy yesterday," said Irene crossly.

"I know. But I've misplaced it." Irene got the bound sheets of paper and handed them to Roy.

"How was Staten Island?" she asked.

"Wonderful," said Roy. "And if there ever was a natural, innocent girl, Susan Farmer is it."

"You, too," said Irene.

"What do you mean?"

"You and Mr. Jones. He's been looking moon-eyed all morning. I hope he doesn't let our little contest winner upset his domestic tranquility."

"Don't talk like a nut!" said Roy. "If you ask me," said Irene, "I'm the only sane person around here. The nuts are all of the massive variety—moon-eyed over a girl who's putting on an act, or I'm no judge."

"Then you're no judge," said Roy. "And as for Susan upsetting the tranquility of the Jones domicile—that's impossible."

"Why so?"

"Because there's no tranquility there—to begin with."

Irene smiled in spite of herself. "I think," she said, "that you have something there." She held out her hand. "Sit down, Roy, and have a smoke with me. The boss won't be back for an hour."

"Sorry," said Roy. "I've got too much to do. I'm taking Susan to the photographer's right away. She's undressing now."

"Undressing!" Irene exclaimed. "For heaven's sake!"

"I mean," said Roy, "she's in that vacant office getting into her sunbonnet and gingham gown. We brought them down from the hotel with us."

"Oh!" said Irene. And then: "So she couldn't even come to the office from the hotel without you escorting her."

"I suppose she could have done so," said Roy. "But I thought the courteous thing to do was call for her."

"I'm glad," said Irene, "that there's one female around here who gets shown a little courtesy."

"My, you're touchy."

"Who wouldn't be?" Irene retorted. "But don't let me keep you. Trot along. And since you're playing nursemaid to Susan, you might as well go further and play lady's maid, and button up her gingham gown."

"If you're trying to get me mad," said Roy, "you might as well give up. And if you were really fond of me, Irene, you'd help Susan with her buttons."

"Me?" said Irene.

"Yes, of course. Why not?" Irene suddenly got up.

"All right, I'll do it," she said. "I'll prove to you that I can be a good sport—in spite of being neglected."

"Thanks, Irene," said Roy, pleased. "Now you're acting like the sort of a girl a fellow can love."

They went out together.

And a short time later Irene was in the vacant office with Susan.

"I suppose," she said, "that you wear dresses like this one most of the time when you're at home."

"Yes," said Susan. "They're so easily washed and ironed."

"Do you do them up yourself?"

"Oh, yes! There's little surplus for hiring things done."

Irene fastened a button.

"What did you think of Staten Island?" she wanted to know.

"It was like going to a new land," said Susan. "And Mr. Leonard was so kind and nice."

"Go on, call him Roy—I don't mind, if he doesn't."

"He doesn't," said Susan. "He asked me to call him by his first name."

"Yes, go on, what was it he said to you?"

"I mean, he talked about liking farms," Susan went on. "And his dreams of having a small place up in Connecticut."

"So he told you that, too, did he?" said Irene.

"I hope you didn't mind."

"Of course not. Naturally I want Roy to do whatever will make him happy—even if he wants to live on a farm."

"But will YOU be happy in the country?"

"I'll manage."

Alumni Of Ohio State Hear Dr. Harold Grimm

Heritage Defense Discussed For Graduates

Before an audience greatly curtailed by many activities in the community, Dr. Harold J. Grimm, assistant professor of history at Ohio State University, presented a timely talk on "The Defense of Our Heritage" at the annual gathering of the Pickaway County Alumni of Ohio State University, Friday, in the parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal Church. Deep thought concerning the present-day problems of youth was evidenced in his comprehensive handling of the subject.

Associated with young people through long years of study in this country and in Germany, where he was an exchange student at Leipzig University in 1929-1930 and a student at Hamburg University for a short period, he has retained the viewpoint of youth.

Dr. Grimm said in opening his stirring talk that a program for "young people must be provided and at once, as their need is paramount. The heritage we cherish, according to the speaker, is not that made up by man, but one made up of principles handed down through the ages from a divine source, an heritage with the vision of a Universal World with a Universal Law, recognizing the sacredness of the individual.

Dr. Grimm said "Make young people feel that they are needed, give them a chance to give and do. We need to fear apathy and indifference. Give them a faith; cooperate with them in their problems; show them that their real purpose in life is geared to ours." Concerning the Church, the School and the State, he advised first that we examine, revitalize and propagandize them, as no institution will function of itself without constant attention.

Dr. Grimm's talk followed a delightful dinner served at tables festive in holiday decorations. Burning red tapers were placed at intervals down the streamers of scarlet and gray that extended the length of tables. Small winter bouquets were the favors at each cover and the speakers table was centered with a large metal bowl of long-needle pine and burning red tapers.

A deliberately informal program of singing and visiting lifted the dinner meeting to a high level of gaiety. Brief talks concerning the development fund of the university were given by J. Wray Henry, association president, and Dr. Grimm, and the concluding business of the evening was the election of the 1942 officers.

Dr. Robert Hedges heads the slate as president, Mrs. Charles Pugsley, vice president, Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, recording secretary, Mrs. Ned Griner, corresponding secretary, and Joseph Peters, treasurer, completing the corps of officers.

The nominating committee included Miss Nellie Oesterle, Miss Sally May and Lewis Quillen. Dr. Hedges served as treasurer at the annual dinner in place of Dr. C. C. Watts of Lancaster, formerly of Circleville, who was unable to be present.

Mrs. Griner and her committee were responsible for the cheerful holiday decorations.

Christ Lutheran Society
The Ladies' Society of Christ Lutheran Church will have an all-day meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. Harry Barthelmas, Deercreek Township.

All members are requested to take a covered dish for the dinner at noon and a 10-cent gift for the exchange.

One hundred and fifty members and visitors of Circleville Chapter No. 90 of the Order of the Eastern Star attended the annual installation meeting Friday in Masonic Temple when Mrs. Tom Acord of Ashville was inducted as worthy matron and George Welker, Circleville, as worthy patron, and their corps of officers took chairs.

INTRAMURAL BB GAMES PLAYED TUESDAY NIGHT

Tuesday night after school the first boys' intramural basketball games were played. There were three games—Juniors and grades seven and eight combined, Senior A and Freshmen, Senior B and Sophomores competing against each other.

The seventh and eighth grade team led the Juniors all through the game but were forced to bear down in the late stages to win by a score of 23 to 19.

Both senior teams won fairly easy victories, the Senior A team winning 26-9 and Senior B 36-12.

Because so few boys attended the meeting held Monday after school, Coach Thomas Armstrong had to limit the league to six teams. The league was to consist of eight teams but the freshmen, sophomores, and juniors did not have enough interested boys to merit two teams representing these classes. This leaves only five teams in the league since because of the need for an even number of teams, the Seniors were divided into two groups.

Mr. Armstrong officiated at Tuesday's game while David Yates and David Mader scored and timed it.

STOOGES URGED TO SELL MORE SEASON TICKETS

Wednesday evening at the Stooze meeting the boys turned in part of their money from the sale of basketball season tickets books.

Books will remain at $1.25 for students and $2.25 for adults. Since there are only seven games left on Circleville's home schedule and there are nine tickets in the books, one would think he wasn't getting his money's worth. Wrong again, McGee, for the books are arranged to make it possible to use more than one ticket on the same night, providing you take a friend. These books can be obtained from any Stooze member.

To date Robert Moon leads in the sale of these books since he has sold 19.

The boys also discussed the storage and repairing of football equipment. If it is at all possible, the club wants to rent a storage room. J. L. Chilcote Jr., club adviser is in charge of trying to find such a place.

The meeting, which was held at Otto Gunther's, was Wednesday because of the home basketball game Tuesday, regular meeting night.

EDITORIAL SAFETY ZONES

Last week at Circleville high school a driving authority, H. M. Pontius, gave a demonstration on safe driving.

In the auditorium preceding the demonstration, he explained safe driving habits and ways to avoid accidents.

Not in driving only are safe habits an asset. During many times in our lives we are helped by the safety zones of life.

One of the most important of these zones is education. Today nearly everyone has a high school education and several have a higher one. By studying and acquiring everything that is offered use, we are building for ourselves a safety zone in life.

Another important zone is a healthy future, both physical and mental. By guarding our health, eating beneficial foods, exercising, and getting the proper amount of sleep, we shall be making another safety zone for life.

Happiness is essential in life to make living worthwhile and is influenced directly by both health and an education. This is another of life's safety zones.

If we all achieve learning, health and happiness, we shall be on the road to success, and we shall be able to escape many danger through life's safety zones.

PONTIOUS TALKS OF SAFETY; LAB PERIOD INCLUDED

H. M. Pontious, safety director of the Ohio Farm Bureau Insurance Companies, gave an educational lecture on traffic safety. Some facts were brought out in his speech which, undoubtedly, much of the public are not familiar. Did you know that more of our lives are spent in cars than any other activity, or that nine people out of each 100 are killed each year and that from the same 600, 292 persons are injured, 25 of these are injured for life? The costs of automobile accidents is $1,600,000,000 or if you digest this figure you find that the cost is $12 per capita.

According to Mr. Pontious, natives of the Buckeye State are prone to believe that these accidents occur in other states but Mr. Pontious proved this to be a falsehood as Ohio ranks 26 in the list of the safest states. The small congested state of Rhode Island is almost three times as safe to live and drive in as Ohio. Mr. Pontious believes that this problem will not be solved until classes are formed in high school and each person affected takes an active part to prevent auto accidents.

Before the assembly began, cards were passed on which there are rules of safety. On the opposite side there is a reaction and braking chart by which it is possible to classify the reaction time of the various drivers.

After the lecture, a lab period was held on Corwin Street between Court and Pickaway. The first thing demonstrated was the proper means of turning a car. Mr. Pontious made this demonstration showing both the proper and improper way of turning in the middle of a block. Next on the program was demonstration of the time required to stop an auto at various speeds. This was shown by Harry Clifton, Mrs. Rosemary Mader and Mr. Robert Wilson; all three had better than average reaction time.

In order to show the reaction time of the various drivers, to the front bumper of the safety car were attached three guns loaded with yellow paint bullets. Above the radiator was a red stop signal. When the signal to stop was given a gun was fired, which marked the street at that point and the red light flashed on. Immediately the driver removed his foot from the accelerator and as he put it upon the brake another gun was automatically fired. When the car came to a full stop the third gun was fired to show the distance traveled between the time the signal was first given, the time the driver hit the brake pedal and the car came to a complete stop.

December 3, 1941—some 400 students of Circleville high school as well as grade children received their report cards for the second six weeks' period. With but 18 shopping days left until Christmas many were leary of "The Awful Truth" for Santa Claus doesn't reward bad little children.

Electrical Living Is The Gift

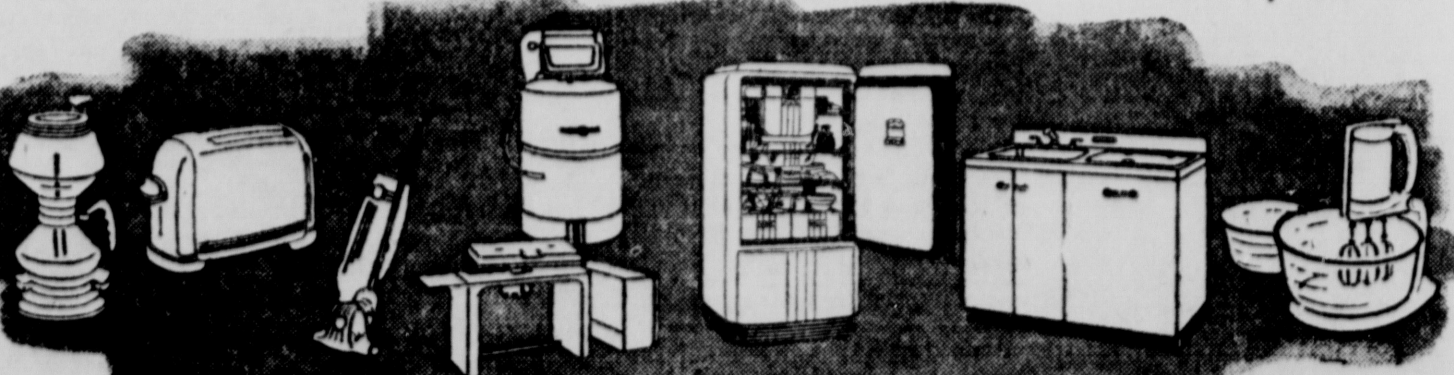

For the Practical Person with a Sentimental Side!

What would that lovely lady of yours rather have than anything else? Gifts that tell her you want to lighten all her household tasks. What gifts fill such an order? Electrical appliances, of course.

Electric washing machines and ironers end wearisome hours of standing. Electric ranges make cooking a mere matter of setting an automatic timer. Vacuum cleaners, refrigerators, toasters, mixers, waffle irons make life easier on Christmas and thousands of days to follow.

Do a bit of investigating. See how little these gifts cost... on what easy payment terms they can be purchased. In fact ask your dealer to explain how electrical appliances help pay for themselves.

Alumni Of Ohio State Hear Dr. Harold Grimm

Heritage Defense Discussed For Graduates

Before an audience greatly curtailed by many activities in the community, Dr. Harold J. Grimm, assistant professor of history at Ohio State University, presented a timely talk on "The Defense of Our Heritage" at the annual gathering of the Pickaway County Alumni of Ohio State University, Friday, in the parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal Church. Deep thought concerning the present-day problems of youth was evidenced in his comprehensive handling of the subject.

Associated with young people through long years of study in this country and in Germany, where he was an exchange student at Leipzig University in 1929-1930 and a student at Hamburg University for a short period, he has retained the viewpoint of youth.

Dr. Grimm said in opening his stirring talk that a program for "young people must be provided and at once, as their need is paramount. The heritage we cherish, according to the speaker, is not that made up by man, but one made up of principles handed down through the ages from a divine source, an heritage with the vision of a Universal World with a Universal Law, recognizing the sacredness of the individual.

Dr. Grimm said "Make young people feel that they are needed, give them a chance to give and do. We need to fear apathy and indifference. Give them a faith; cooperate with them in their problems; show them that their real purpose in life is geared to ours." Concerning the Church, the School and the State, he advised first that we examine, revitalize and propagandize them, as no institution will function of itself without constant attention.

Dr. Grimm's talk followed a delightful dinner served at tables festive in holiday decorations. Burning red tapers were placed at intervals down the streamers of scarlet and gray that extended the length of tables. Small winter bouquets were the favors at each cover and the speakers table was centered with a large metal bowl of long-needle pine and burning red tapers.

A deliberately informal program of singing and visiting lifted the dinner meeting to a high level of gaiety.

Brief talks concerning the development fund of the university were given by J. Wray Henry, association president, and Dr. Grimm, and the concluding business of the evening was the election of the 1942 officers.

Dr. Robert Hedges heads the slate as president, Mrs. Charles Pugsley, vice president, Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, recording secretary, Mrs. Ned Griner, corresponding secretary, and Joseph Peters, treasurer, completing the corps of officers.

The nominating committee included Miss Nellie Oesterle, Miss Sally May and Lewis Quillen.

Dr. Hedges served as treasurer at the annual dinner in place of Dr. C. C. Watts of Lancaster, formerly of Circleville, who was unable to be present.

Mrs. Griner and her committee were responsible for the cheerful holiday decorations.

HI-Y CLUB CANCELS REGULAR MEETING

It was necessary for the Hi-Y club to cancel its meeting this week as several members of the club had to play in the C. H. S. band which was to give a concert at a downtown theatre.

GIRLS COMPETE IN GYM CONTEST

Miss Eleanor Ryan, physical education teacher, announced Thursday, that some of the volleyball games will be played after school.

Games are played in round robin style. When a team wins a game, it receives two points, tie games are given one point and lost games receive no credit. After a team has lost two games it is disqualified.

Captains were chosen from the various teams by the team members and they are as follows: Monday Freshmen, Maxine Ankrum; Friday Freshmen, Eleanor Mast; Monday Sophomore, Fannie Naah; Friday Sophomore, Catherine Betz; Tuesday Juniors, Betty Fasnough; Thursday Seniors, Lois Madison.

Managers of the team are chosen by Miss Ryan and the selections have not yet been made for all of the teams.

THIS CHRISTMAS GIVE EASIER LIVING

Electrical Living Is The Gift

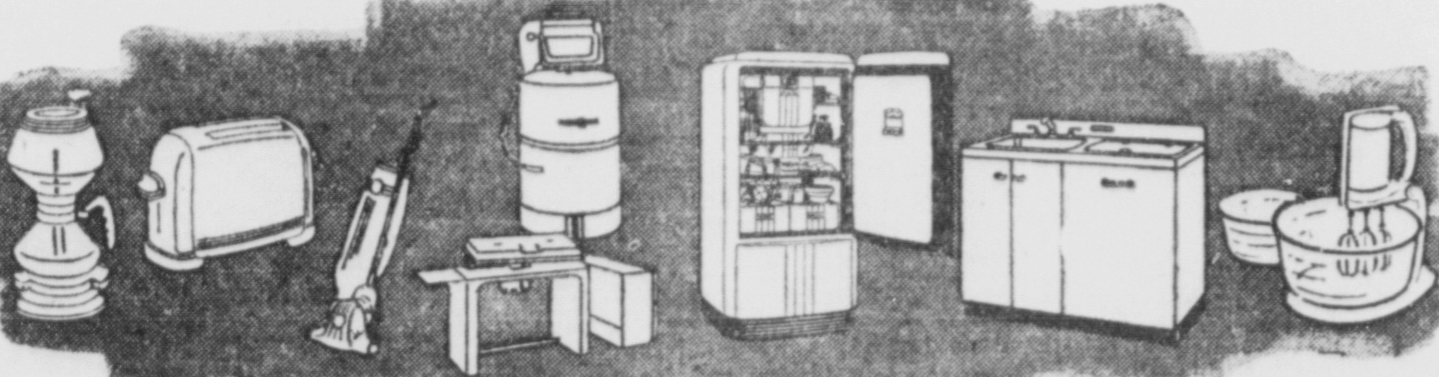

For the Practical Person with a Sentimental Side!

What would that lovely lady of yours rather have than anything else? Gifts that tell her you want to lighten all her household tasks. What gifts fill such an order? Electrical appliances, of course.

Electric washing machines and ironers end wearisome hours of standing. Electric ranges make cooking a mere matter of setting an automatic timer. Vacuum cleaners, refrigerators, toasters, mixers, waffle irons make life easier on Christmas and thousands of days to follow.

Do a bit of investigating. See how little these gifts cost... on what easy payment terms they can be purchased. In fact ask your dealer to explain how electrical appliances help pay for themselves.

Grant P. Ward, State Senator, Victim Of Heart Attack At 54.

EX-COACH, RADIO SPEAKER SERVED PICKAWAY AREA

Long Service In Assembly, Upper House Ended By Death

Grant P. Ward of Columbus, who represented Pickaway and Franklin Counties in the Ohio senate, died Friday night of a heart attack suffered when he was crossing a downtown street in the state capital. Ward, who was 54, was a nationally known authority on football and had been in charge of broadcasting Ohio State football games over the university station, WOSU.

Mr. Ward was a colleague of Robert Hoffman, also a Columbus Republican, in the senate, both serving the Pickaway-Franklin district.

After suffering the attack, Ward was carried into a nearby hotel where he was pronounced dead by Dr. J. Quinn Dorgan. With him when he died were his former wife, his two sons and his two sisters.

Ward had just returned to Columbus Thursday from a week's vacation in New York. He had been in ill health for the last three months.

Ward was serving his sixth term in the Ohio legislature and would have ended his service December 31, 1942. Four of his six terms were served in the House and as a Senate member for the last two terms, he served as Republican whip.

As a member of the House, Ward sponsored the law which established the State Conservation Division. One of his predominant personal interests during his political career was the welfare of Ohio State University, his alma mater.

As a sports authority, Ward gained recognition as a football writer and as a sports announcer. He recently completed his 13th season as a broadcaster describing Ohio State University football games.

Native Of Wellston
Ward was a native of Wellston, O., and was graduated from Wellston High School. From there he went to Ohio State to work for two degrees, arts and law.

He played varsity center on the Ohio State football team in 1912 and the next year went to Harrisburg, Ill., as high school football and track coach. In 1914, he coached football at Christian Brothers' College.

In 1916, Ward was a member of the faculty and a coach at Clinton High School and in 1917, was appointed Columbus city recreation director. He resigned that post to go to war. Attending the Navy Officers' Training School, he was commissioned as an ensign on the U. S. S. Newport News.

Following his discharge from the Navy, Ward entered law college at Ohio State and joined the athletics staff. He was football line coach and director of intramural sports for several years.

He received his law degree in 1924 and opened law offices in Columbus. In 1936 he was the Republican candidate for Congress from the 12th district but was defeated in the Roosevelt landslide.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

power-driven boats, and construction machinery, however, conquering the wilderness and all these natural obstacles, and the seven new air fields will be usable by Canadian or United States pilots throughout the year in the future. Heaviest bombers or swiftest fighters will be able to land safely on these wilderness-surrounded air fields. Their equipment will be thoroughly modern. This will include meteorological service radio range, two-way communication and flood-lighting facilities.

Starting at Edmonton, the eastern route runs 1,000 miles to Whitehorse. Airdromes have been built at Grande Prairie, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson and Watson Lake.

On the western side of the Rockies, the route runs from Vancouver, largest city in British Columbia, and Kamloops to Williams Lake, Prince George, and on to Fort St. John, where it joins the eastern route.

Another airdrome is located at Smithers within operating distance from Prince George. This links points on Canada's Pacific coast with the southern tip of the Alaska panhandle.

Canadians say they are spending $9,000,000 on this air base link between the United States and Alaska, thereby helping to provide a route that is estimated to be 4,000 miles shorter between Chicago and Shanghai. Edmonton, according to the Canadians, is only 36 hours flying time from Tokyo.

Attorney Jackson brushed aside these protestations to obtain yesterday's indictment against her, and has indicated he is ready at any time to begin presentation of his case in the broker's murder.

Moreover, authorities delved into the past and found evidence that Miss O'Keefe for several years had taken advantage of her secretarial position to improve her personal finances.

Seven charges of embezzlement, from a company in which Franklin was interested, were brought against her as a result of this investigation. Evidence also was obtained that Miss O'Keefe was in need of funds at the time of the murder.

The purported confession ascribed to Miss O'Keefe stated that she paid two men $100 to burn Franklin to death. His charred body was found in burned wreckage of his automobile beside the San Jacinto River.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Philodendron.

This is a vine plant that you can grow in a small flower pot in a window, that will require very little attention. "I pot this plant, like you would any other house plant, and then keep plenty of water on it, and it grows and vines vigorously all winter", Mrs. Vivian Scott of Lynchburg, Ohio said, after showing me her plants. She gave us a start by clipping off a part of a vine and it is doing very well in a south window. Add this plant to your winter collection if you do not have it. It will add a touch of green to the window and to the room that you will like when snow covers the ground and wind is howling around the house.

Sage.

"It is higher than it has been for a long time", Lawrence McElwee of Sinking Spring, a merchant in the community recently pointed out.

"Isn't sage one of the plants we ought to raise in our gardens again?" I said to Mr. McElwee, and he agreed with me. A generation ago sage was in almost every garden and one of the "fall chores" as one grandmother expressed it, was to pick the sage leaves and dry them in the kitchen for winter seasoning. It was a pleasant experience, too; that the children enjoyed doing.

May I suggest that you get a start of sage again for your garden. You may be able to get it from some of the older residents of the community, or if they do not have it, you can buy it from any seed firm.

Wild Bittersweet as a Bouquet.

I recently saw this at the home of William Irvin in Sinking Spring. When I complimented Mrs. Irvin on the beauty and attractiveness of a bouquet of this plant, that was very attractively arranged she said that it had been in the house several weeks, and yet it had not lost its bright orange yellow color, and very few of the petals had fallen off.

It would be a good plan to get a start of bittersweet in your home plantings, so that you can have some pretty winter bouquets, without going very far after them. Wild bittersweet is harder to find than it was a few years ago, and it is not hard to transplant. While I have never seen the "tame" bittersweet, like that sold by nurseries, I understand that it is very pretty and easy to raise.

Home Curing Meat.

Here is a recipe for home curing meat, that has been used by the McElwee family of Sinking Spring, for several years, with very good results:—

- 20 pounds of meat.
- 1/2 pint of salt.
- 2 tablespoonfuls brown sugar.
- 2 tablespoonfuls black pepper.
- 1 teaspoonful red pepper.

Mix into a thin paste by adding hot water, and rub into the meat, after it is well cooled. Wrap in brown paper and cover with muslin bags and hang with the bone end down. The meat will require no more attention, but you can smoke it in the sacks with hickory wood, if you prefer, which will improve its flavor.

Water Close to the Self Feeder.

I was on a farm this week where the owner was planning to move his hogs, so that he could set his self feeder on the south side of a hill, and near a stream of fresh spring water, that rarely ever freezes. "That's what I'd call a good move, that will pay you well in dollars and cents," I said, "for your hogs are not very well protected against the cold north winds we are having at times now, and they make a long trip to water."

A Windbreak.

This man is thinking of making a windbreak on the north side of the feeder, too, which will give his hogs some additional protection, while they eat, which will be a wise thing to do. It will be made from old boards, at very little expense.

Big Loads of Hogs.

I recently learned that McKinley Kirk, a livestock buyer of Washington C. H., Ohio, has a reputation for hauling very large loads of stock and doing his work well. "He has hauled as many as 80 head of finished hogs for me," Everett Grove of Highland R.F.D., recently said. "He handled the hogs too well", Mr. Grove added, which is a high complement for any livestock dealer, for by the time you care for hogs from the time they are little pigs, until they are ready for market, you get to know them as individuals, and you think a lot of them, unless you happen to have a few "rogues" in the bunch, that want to get out and that don't co-operate with you, and you even get attached to them.

There is very little reason for "beating up" on livestock if it is properly handled, and Mr. Kirk knows how to handle it.

tion of complying with the conditions laid down in the British note.

"Accordingly during the night His Majesty's Government sent each of the three governments a note which will be delivered in the course of today by the American ministers in the three capitals, notifying the three governments that Britain will consider herself in a state of war with the three as from one minute after midnight tonight.

"Text of the notes will be issued later."

In London, Scotland Yard officers using fast squad cars rounded up about 200 Finns, Hungarians and Romanians in the capital district and took them to a clearing center.

From there they will be sent to internment camps after the usual investigation by aliens' tribunals.

Britain declared war in reprisal for the refusal of the three nations to cease attacks on Russia. British authorities said the notes to Romania and Hungary were phrased in identical language while the communication to Finland was somewhat different.

They said there had been some misleading speculation regarding the original British note to Finland.

It will be found, they said, that the original note required Finland to call a halt, cease hostilities and not undertake further active military operations.

French Police Inspector Combats Communists At Bordeaux

PARIS (Via Berlin), Dec. 6—The inspector general of French police went to the port of Bordeaux today to take charge of what was officially called an "anti-Communist" campaign.

This development occurred after Admiral Francois Bard, prefect of the Paris police, appealed to the population of Paris to aid in finding the assailants in an effort to avert the anticipated severe reprisals.

Another German major, not identified, was wounded slightly Thursday night by another terrorist who fired a pistol shot and fled.

The third attack occurred early yesterday near the Versailles gate when two shots were fired but missed their mark.

Meanwhile, Admiral Francois Bard, prefect of the Paris police, appealed to the population of Paris to aid in finding the assailants in an effort to avert the anticipated severe reprisals.

VICHY, Dec. 6—German occupational authorities in the Paris area were expected today to clamp down with severe new penalties in reprisal for assaults by Paris gunmen on three German officers in the last two days.

Grant P. Ward, State Senator, Victim Of Heart Attack At 54.

EX-COACH, RADIO SPEAKER SERVED PICKAWAY AREA

Long Service In Assembly, Upper House Ended By Death

Grant P. Ward of Columbus, who represented Pickaway and Franklin Counties in the Ohio senate, died Friday night of a heart attack suffered when he was crossing a downtown street in the state capital. Ward, who was 54, was a nationally known authority on football and had been in charge of broadcasting Ohio State football games over the university station, WOSU.

Mr. Ward was a colleague of Robert Hoffman, also a Columbus Republican, in the senate, both serving the Pickaway-Franklin district.

After suffering the attack, Ward was carried into a nearby hotel where he was pronounced dead by Dr. J. Quinn Dorgan. With him when he died were his former wife, his two sons and his two sisters.

Ward had just returned to Columbus Thursday from a week's vacation in New York. He had been in ill health for the last three months.

Ward was serving his sixth term in the Ohio legislature and would have ended his service December 31, 1942. Four of his six terms were served in the House and as a Senate member for the last two terms, he served as Republican whip.

As a member of the House, Ward sponsored the law which established the State Conservation Division. One of his predominant personal interests during his political career was the welfare of Ohio State University, his alma mater.

As a sports authority, Ward gained recognition as a football writer and as a sports announcer. He recently completed his 13th season as a broadcaster describing Ohio State University football games.

Native Of Wellston
Ward was a native of Wellston, O., and was graduated from Wellston High School. From there he went to Ohio State to work for two degrees, arts and law.

He played varsity center on the Ohio State football team in 1912 and the next year went to Harrisburg, Ill., as high school football and track coach. In 1914, he coached football at Christian Brothers' College.

In 1916, Ward was a member of the faculty and a coach at Clinton High School and in 1917, was appointed Columbus city recreation director. He resigned that post to go to war. Attending the Navy Officers' Training School, he was commissioned as an ensign on the U. S. S. Newport News.

Following his discharge from the Navy, Ward entered law college at Ohio State and joined the athletics staff. He was football line coach and director of intramural sports for several years.

He received his law degree in 1924 and opened law offices in Columbus. In 1936 he was the Republican candidate for Congress from the 12th district but was defeated in the Roosevelt landslide.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Heaviest bombers or swiftest fighters will be able to land safely on these wilderness-surrounded air fields. Their equipment will be thoroughly modern. This will include meteorological service radio range, two-way communication and flood-lighting facilities.

Starting at Edmonton, the eastern route runs 1,000 miles to Whitehorse. Airdromes have been built at Grande Prairie, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson and Watson Lake.

On the western side of the Rockies, the route runs from Vancouver, largest city in British Columbia, and Kamloops to Williams Lake, Prince George, and on to Fort St. John, where it joins the eastern route.

Another airdrome is located at Smithers within operating distance from Prince George. This links points on Canada's Pacific coast with the southern tip of the Alaska panhandle.

Canadians say they are spending $9,000,000 on this air base link between the United States and Alaska, thereby helping to provide a route that is estimated to be 4,000 miles shorter between Chicago and Shanghai. Edmonton, according to the Canadians, is only 36 hours flying time from Tokyo.

Moreover, authorities delved into the past and found evidence that Miss O'Keefe for several years had taken advantage of her secretarial position to improve her personal finances.

Seven charges of embezzlement, from a company in which Franklin was interested, were brought against her as a result of this investigation. Evidence also was obtained that Miss O'Keefe was in need of funds at the time of the murder.

The purported confession ascribed to Miss O'Keefe stated that she paid two men $100 to burn Franklin to death. His charred body was found in burned wreckage of his automobile beside the San Jacinto River.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Philodendron.

This is a vining plant that you can grow in a small flower pot in a window, that will require very little attention. "I pot this plant, like you would any other house plant, and then keep plenty of water on it, and it grows and vines vigorously all winter", Mrs. Vivian Scott of Lynchburg, Ohio said, after showing me her plants. She gave us a start by clipping off a part of a vine and it is doing very well in a south window. Add this plant to your winter collection if you do not have it. It will add a touch of green to the window and to the room that you will like when snow covers the ground and wind is howling around the house.

Sage.

"It is higher than it has been for a long time", Lawrence McElwee of Sinking Spring, a merchant in the community recently pointed out.

"Isn't sage one of the plants we ought to raise in our gardens again?" I said to Mr. McElwee, and he agreed with me. A generation ago sage was in almost every garden and one of the "fall chores" as one grandmother expressed it, was to pick the sage leaves and dry them in the kitchen for winter seasoning. It was a pleasant experience, too; that the children enjoyed doing.

May I suggest that you get a start of sage again for your garden. You may be able to get it from some of the older residents of the community, or if they do not have it, you can buy it from any seed firm.

Wild Bittersweet as a Bouquet.

I recently saw this at the home of William Irvin in Sinking Spring. When I complimented Mrs. Irvin on the beauty and attractiveness of a bouquet of this plant, that was very attractively arranged she said that it had been in the house several weeks, and yet it had not lost its bright orange yellow color, and very few of the petals had fallen off.

It would be a good plan to get a start of bittersweet in your home plantings, so that you can have some pretty winter bouquets, without going very far after them. Wild bittersweet is harder to find than it was a few years ago, and it is not hard to transplant. While I have never seen the "tame" bittersweet, like that sold by nurseries, I understand that it is very pretty and easy to raise.

Home Curing Meat.

Here is a recipe for home curing meat, that has been used by the McElwee family of Sinking Spring, for several years, with very good results:— 20 pounds of meat, 1/2 pint of salt, 2 tablespoon-fuls brown sugar, 2 tablespoon-fuls black pepper, 1 teaspoonful red pepper.

Mix into a thin paste by adding hot water, and rub into the meat, after it is well cooled. Wrap in brown paper and cover with muslin bags and hang with the bone end down. The meat will require no more attention, but you can smoke it in the sacks with hickory wood, if you prefer, which will improve its flavor.

Water Close to the Self Feeder.

I was on a farm this week where the owner was planning to move his hogs, so that he could set his self feeder on the south side of a hill, and near a stream of fresh spring water, that rarely ever freezes. That's what I'd call a good move, that will pay you well in dollars and cents. I said, "for your hogs are not very well protected against the cold north winds we are having at times now, and they make a long trip to water."

A Windbreak.

This man is thinking of making a windbreak on the north side of the feeder, too, which will give his hogs some additional protection, while they eat, which will be a wise thing to do. It will be made from old boards, at very little expense.

Big Loads of Hogs.

I recently learned that McKinley Kirk, a livestock buyer of Washington C. H., Ohio, has a reputation for hauling very large loads of stock and doing his work well. "He has hauled as many as 80 head of finished hogs for me," Everett Grove of Highland R.F.D., recently said. "He handled the hogs too well", Mr. Grove added, which is a high complement for any livestock dealer, for by the time you care for hogs from the time they are little pigs, until they are ready for market, you get to know them as individuals, and you think a lot of them, unless you happen to have a few "rogues" in the bunch, that want to get out and that don't co-operate with you, and you even get attached to them.

There is very little reason for "beating up" on livestock if it is properly handled, and Mr. Kirk knows how to handle it.

tion of complying with the conditions laid down in the British note.

"Accordingly during the night His Majesty's Government sent each of the three governments a note which will be delivered in the course of today by the American ministers in the three capitals, notifying the three governments that Britain will consider herself in a state of war with the three as from one minute after midnight tonight."

"Text of the notes will be issued later."

In London, Scotland Yard officers using fast squad cars rounded up about 200 Finns, Hungarians and Romanians in the capital district and took them to a clearing center.

From there they will be sent to internment camps after the usual investigation by aliens' tribunals.

British declared war in reprisal for the refusal of the three nations to cease attacks on Russia.

British authorities said the notes to Romania and Hungary were phrased in identical language while the communication to Finland was somewhat different.

They said there had been some misleading speculation regarding the original British note to Finland.

It will be found, they said, that the original note required Finland to call a halt, cease hostilities and not undertake further active military operations.
